

ABSTRACTREPOSITORY WEBSITE DEVELOPMENT*PT. TELKOM SEMARANG

Author :

Merry Shovita Rizkiana

15102104

The website is an online media that can accommodate a variety of content, ranging from entertainment, information to procedures for making or arranging things. In addition, the website can also act as a medium to facilitate work in a company. Website development is carried out with the aim to facilitate controlling and managing company projects that have installed physical / fiber. The addition of the website repository feature is useful for managing obstacles and knowing the progress of the company project. The data used in the development of this website is the result of interviews with field supervisors, because the data that is loaded will lead to the reporting of handover events, which means that the project has been completed with partners who work together. From the development of the website, it is recommended to make the website look neater and more organized to fit the part and make it easier to use.

Keywords : Informatic, Repository, Website

